Room 8 June Newsletter

Last month, in Room 8, we had so much fun talking about Eric Carle, Mother's Day, Zoo and Farm. This month we will discuss Dinosaurs, Father's Day, Summer Fun, Juneteenth, and Space!

As a class we are working on volume control. Often young children will yell when speaking not only to get our attention but so we can better understand their developing language. Now that our language development has come so far we are working on inside voices. We often remind children that they don't need to yell when someone is right next to them, including us. We would appreciate it if you would continue this at home. A great technique we use for volume control and interrupting is to say to the child; "hold my hand until I can give you my attention." This way the child knows we've acknowledged them but that they need to wait their turn.
